

OBITUARY

STEFANO ZACCHETTI 1968–2020

When news of the sudden death of Stefano Zacchetti, Professor of Buddhist Studies at the University of Oxford, started spreading among friends, students and colleagues on the evening of 29 April 2020, there was perhaps no less room for disbelief than for utter shock. The sheer absurdity of an untimely end was taking from us, aged only 52, a magnificent scholar who had already given so much to Buddhist Studies, and who would have given so much more still. The vagaries of publishing schedules have made it so that this imperfect remembrance of him should be written when well over a year has passed since that tragic evening, and emotional tributes bearing witness to the enormous esteem and affection he enjoyed across and beyond the field have already appeared in other venues.¹ But as grief peters out in the callous distance of time for those who were privileged with his friendship and his teaching, stating the value of his scholarly life and legacy seems as important for them—for us—as for everyone else who can now only read his work.

1. See the profile of Zacchetti's life and scholarship by Ester Bianchi for the AISC (Associazione Italiana Studi Cinesi) at <https://aisc-org.it/stefano-zacchetti-1968-2020-contributo-agli-studi-buddhisti/> (in Italian), which also includes links to tributes and testimonies from several scholars and friends; and the intimate, moving portrait by Francesca Tarocco for the European Association of Chinese Studies at <http://chinesestudies.eu/?p=4087>. Both were published in May 2020, and are also available at <https://glorisunglobalnetwork.org/in-memoriam-stefano-zacchetti/>. See also the extensive discussion of Zacchetti's work in Buddhist Studies by Ji Yun 紀贊, "Zuo Guanming (Stefano Zacchetti, 1968–2020) de Hanyu Fojiao wenxianxue gongxian jianshu" 左冠明的漢語佛教文獻學貢獻簡述, Hualin guoji Foxue xuekan 華林國際佛學學刊 3.2 (2020): 226–290 (in Chinese), at <https://glorisunglobalnetwork.org/chin-hijbs/e-journal/3-2/226-290/?lang=zh-hant>.

Stefano Zacchetti was born in Milan on 16 January 1968. His secondary schooling at the liceo classico, which in earlier days had been a default option for those aiming at most types of higher education in Italy, was for him an opportunity to build solid bases in ancient Greek, Latin and philosophy, and with them the philological mindset and love for the humanities that would stay with him all his life. His distinctive scholarly voice had already emerged with powerful maturity by the end of his university years at Ca' Foscari in Venice. He had studied there Chinese and Sanskrit, under Maurizio Scarpari and Giuliano Boccali respectively; before and after his graduation he also spent decisive periods of research in China (Sichuan University, Chengdu, 1990–1992) and at the Sinologisch Instituut in Leiden (1994–1995), where he worked with Tilmann Vetter and Erik Zürcher. His tesi di laurea—a substantial final dissertation in the old Italian single-degree system—was on the Chinese versions of the Diamond Sūtra (1994).² As an offshoot came his first scholarly article in T'oung Pao (1996a), an early testimony to his remarkable combination of linguistic virtuosity and skill in historical and textual analysis: by identifying an abnormally literal, Sanskritising rendition of the sutra in the Chinese canon as what was in fact an unedited draft, Zacchetti could bring his readers right inside the translator's workshop, and open views on the translated text as process rather than product. His Ph.D. dissertation (La più antica versione cinese della Pañcaviṃśatisāhasrikā Prajñāpāramitā, 1999), on a topic he had chosen after a conversation with Zürcher, earned him a reputation as an emerging authority on Prajñāpāramitā literature, but also established his research interests firmly in the earliest stage of Buddhist translations in China.

After a brief experience as an assistant professor of Sinology at the University of Padua, Italy, in 2000–2001, a major turn in Zacchetti's academic trajectory came with his appointment as Associate Professor of Sino-Indian Buddhist Philology at the International Research Institute for Advanced Buddhology, Soka University, Tokyo. This Japanese hub of cutting-edge scholarship in Buddhist Studies was to prove the perfect environment for his research. There he started enduring conversations—and in several cases lifelong friendships—with such scholars as Karashima Seishi, his host, and then Jan Nattier, Jens-Uwe Hartmann, Oskar von Hinüber, John McRae, and many others. There he also produced his first research monograph—In Praise of the Light: A Critical Synoptic Edition with an Annotated Translation of Chapters 1–3 of Dharmarakṣa's Guang zan jing 光讚經, Being the Earliest Chinese Translation of the Larger Prajñāpāramitā (2005). This was a considerably revised version of his doctoral thesis, with so many new insights and directions of enquiry. Zacchetti could now confidently trace the development of the Perfection of Wisdom literature, and show that the Pañcaviṃśatisāhasrikā was but a relatively late offshoot of a family of 'Larger Prajñāpāramitā' texts. His historical reconstruction of *Dharmarakṣa's late third-century translation (T.222) was an investigative masterpiece. No less significantly, he brought the apparatus of his Chinese text to unprecedented levels of sophistication, as he wrote, in the unassuming guise of a mere subsection, an entire history of all the printed editions of the Chinese Buddhist canon, with their lineages, variants, and mutual relationships (2005, 92–117). This tour de force is now widely regarded as one of the very best introductions to the topic, and yet it was simply conceived as an extended footnote of sorts.

2. Full references are given in the bibliography in appendix.

The Japanese years also yielded an impressive series of studies in another of Zacchetti's areas of specialization: An Shigao's 安世高 (fl. 148–170) translations of Buddhist texts, the earliest known in China (2002a, 2002b, 2002d, 2003, 2004a, 2004b, 2004c, 2004d, 2005b). This was an interest that went back to conversations with Paul Harrison, Vetter and Zürcher during his visits to Leiden, and had already resulted in an article in Italian (1997), but was now rekindled with Zacchetti's involvement in a research group led by Ochiai Toshinori (International College of Postgraduate Buddhist Studies) on the newly found manuscripts at the Kongō-ji 金剛寺 temple near Ōsaka. As long-lost texts by An Shigao—the original Anban shouyi jing 安般守意經, two versions of the Shi'er men jing 十二門經—reemerged from the penumbra of a Japanese monastic library, he happened to be the right scholar in the right place and time.

In 2005 Zacchetti returned to Italy to become a lecturer in Chinese at his alma mater, Ca' Foscari in Venice. His main brief there—teaching Mandarin Chinese—was a rather narrow jacket for his scholarship, but he endeavoured to organize lectures and seminars in Classical and Buddhist Chinese as well as Buddhist literature and thought, whilst keeping and expanding his research interests. These years saw in fact a new spate of fundamental studies on An Shigao's work (2007, 2010a, 2010b, 2010c), beside a number of publications in Italian on aspects of Buddhist history and philosophy (2006a, 2006b, 2008a, 2010d, 2010e, 2012). An Shigao's translations were also at the centre of a very successful course on early Chinese Buddhist commentaries that Zacchetti gave as a Numata Visiting Professor in Buddhist Studies at the University of California, Berkeley, during the Fall semester of 2011.

The academic fruits of this scholarly labour were finally reaped in 2012, when Zacchetti was appointed as the Yehan Numata Professor of Buddhist Studies and Fellow of Balliol College at the University of Oxford. That he should progress to such a position from a simple lectureship in Chinese attests, probably better than anything else, to the recognition his research had achieved. The Oxford years were both rewarding and challenging, with much more of Zacchetti's energies now going into teaching, tutoring, supervising, administration, or such demanding Oxonian rituals as the yearly rounds of admission interviews. They were years of frequent conferences and teaching abroad—numerous summer programmes in China, but also repeated guest lectures in Italy. He continued his work on the history of the Buddhist canon in China (2016a, 2016b); he also published important summaries of research in two of his key areas of expertise, Prajñāpāramitā literature (2013, and especially 2015a) and An Shigao (2019). Most of all, however, he worked on a major monograph on The Da zhidu lun 大智度論 (Mahāprajñāpāramitopadeśa*) and the History of the Larger Prajñāpāramitā (2021), in many ways the product of two decades of reflection and research on Buddhist exegesis and the Perfection of Wisdom literature, which he had virtually brought to completion.

Of Stefano Zacchetti's personal qualities others have already written, and better than it could be done here. He was as clever as he was unpretentious, a rare blend of artless erudition and bonhomie. He was viscerally modest. He was also very funny and generous. And of course, he was an extremely talented scholar and teacher, with a contagious passion for his objects of research. But the broader significance of his work deserves no less of our attention than the lingering trail of his warm humanity. It may be easy at first to see Zacchetti's scholarship in Buddhist Studies as highly specialist, focused as it appears to have been on a number of well-carved niches that yet give no obvious sign of interconnection: An Shigao and the language of early Chinese Buddhist translations, the "Larger Prajñāpāramitā" literature in Sanskrit and Chinese, early Chinese Buddhist exegesis, the history of the manuscript and printed canon in China. In each of these areas he has no doubt left many lasting contributions that it would be difficult to enumerate, though at least passing reference, apart from those mentioned above, should be made to his skilful unravelling of An Shigao's obscure renditions of Buddhist texts into "a largely invented artificial idiom" (2007, 396); or his groundbreaking identification of a work from this translator, the Yin chi ru jing 陰持入經 (T.603), as a close counterpart to chapter 6 of the Peṭakopadesa, a Pāli treatise on hermeneutic methodology; or his painstaking lexicographical enquiries, scattered across countless erudite footnotes—for he was sceptical of ready-made equations of Indic and Chinese as found in dictionaries of Buddhist terms, and always attempted instead to anchor his interpretations to specific textual counterparts. And, to be sure, he was perfectly capable of addressing and attracting wider readerships, although he did this chiefly in Italian, for example with essays in Buddhist philosophy, or with his deft translations of Fazang's 法藏 "Treatise on the Golden Lion" (jin shizi zhang 金師子章) (2000) and of fourteen jātaka tales from Kang Senghui's Liudu ji jing 六度集經 (T.152) (2013).

At a closer look, however, Zacchetti's research over the years reveals a long-term vision and a coherent thread running across its many outcomes that closely bear on its overall significance. Its main themes and directions were already largely established by the time he achieved his doctorate: a conference paper read in 1999 at the meeting of the International Association of Buddhist Studies, for example, was on "The Da zhidu lun T 1509 as a Source for the Textual History of the Larger Prajñāpāramitā," the very topic of his posthumous monograph (2021), which has just been published thanks to the editorial care of Michael Radich and Jonathan Silk. In this last, formidable work, Zacchetti undertakes a close analysis of the Da zhidu lun, a massive commentary, of probably Northwest Indian origins, of a "Larger Prajñāpāramitā" that has been immensely authoritative in East Asia since its translation by Kumārajīva at the beginning of the fifth century, but perhaps even more in Western Buddhist studies in the wake of Étienne Lamotte's no less monumental translation of its first part (Le Traité de la grande vertu de sagesse, 5 vols., 1944–1970). Zacchetti's impressively documented finding here is that in a significant number of cases, the glosses in the Da zhidu lun prefigure readings in later recensions of the "Larger Prajñāpāramitā," and that therefore the exegesis anticipates directions of expansion in the text itself, until the latter does appear to crystallize downstream of the transmission process. But we only have to glance at Zacchetti's other work to see that the porous boundary between text and commentary had been a constant focus for him, and that aside from his research on the Prajñāpāramitā literature, he had notably explored it in several of his essays on An Shigao's translations (2002a, 2003, 2004c, 2007, 2010a, 2010b), just as his studies on the history of the canon had looked at the other end of the process. Far from viewing Buddhist translation as the mechanical, if imperfect, rendition of fixed canonical texts and idioms from Indic into Chinese (what on occasion he referred to as the "Mahāvvyūtpatti model"), Zacchetti had thus seen early on the extent to which this practice could rather reproduce on Chinese soil the very making of the Buddha's word as a constitutively open text, and therefore shed light on fundamental processes of scriptural formation in Buddhism. It took an immense scholarship of breathtaking skill, vision and patience to build this view over the years as cogently as he did, and even greater modesty to present and almost hide such incredible results as simply and unassumingly, as he also did. Acknowledging as much should give us no little measure of comfort while we still mourn this cruel loss, for Stefano Zacchetti's work will stay with us for a very long time to come.

Antonello Palumbo

Bibliography³

Authored books

- 2021 The Da zhidu lun 大智度論 (Mahāprajñāpāramitopadeśa*) and the History of the Larger Prajñāpāramitā: Patterns of Textual Variation in Mahāyāna Sūtra Literature. Edited for posthumous publication by Michael Radich and Jonathan Silk. Hamburg Buddhist Studies 14. Hamburg: Numata Center for Buddhist Studies; Bochum/Freiburg: projekt verlag.
- 2013 Storie delle sei perfezioni. Racconti scelti dal Liu du ji jing. Venezia: Marsilio.
- 2005 In Praise of the Light: A Critical Synoptic Edition with an Annotated Translation of Chapters 1-3 of Dharmarakṣa's Guang zan jing 光讚經, Being the Earliest Chinese Translation of the Larger Prajñāpāramitā. Bibliotheca Philologica et Philosophica Buddhica VIII. Tokyo: The International Research Institute for Advanced Buddhology — Soka University.
- 2000 Fazang. Il Trattato del leone d'oro. Padova: Esedra Editrice.

Edited books

- forthcoming a Chinese Buddhism and the Scholarship of Erik Zürcher (Papers from the conference in Leiden, 12–14 February 2014) [title to be confirmed]. Edited by Jonathan Silk and Stefano Zacchetti. Sinica Leidensia. Leiden: Brill.
- 2016 Mahāyāna Texts: Prajñāpāramitā Texts (1). Edited by Seishi Karashima, Youngjin Lee, Jundo Nagashima, Fumio Shoji, Kenta Suzuki, Ye Shaoyong and Stefano Zacchetti.

3. In compiling this bibliography I have relied in part on the list of Professor Zacchetti's publications posted by Zhao You 趙悠 at <https://aisc-org.it/stefano-zacchetti-publications-list/>, with additions and corrections. Details of forthcoming publications were kindly provided by Michael Radich and Jonathan Silk.

Gilgit Manuscripts in the National Archives of India, Facsimile Edition, Vol. II.1. New Delhi: The National Archives of India and Tokyo: The International Research Institute for Advanced Buddhology, Soka University.

Articles

- forthcoming b “A Unique Trajectory: Erik Zürcher’s Studies of Chinese Buddhism.” In Chinese Buddhism and the Scholarship of Erik Zürcher, edited by Jonathan Silk and Stefano Zacchetti. Sinica Leidensia. Leiden: Brill.
- forthcoming c “Blind Spots and One-Way Tracks in Chinese Buddhist Historiography.” In Chinese Buddhism and the Scholarship of Erik Zürcher, edited by Jonathan Silk and Stefano Zacchetti. Sinica Leidensia. Leiden: Brill.
- 2019 “An Shigao.” In Brill’s Encyclopedia of Buddhism. Vol. 2: Lives, edited by Jonathan A. Silk (chief ed.), Richard Bowring, Vincent Eltschinger, Michael Radich, 630–641. Leiden: Brill.
- 2016a “The Catalog of All Canonical Scriptures.” In Buddhist Stone Sutras in China: Sichuan Province, Volume 3, Wofoyuan Section C (Zhongguo Fojiao shijing: Sichuan sheng, disan juan, Wofoyuan C qu 中國佛教石經 — 四川省第三卷臥佛院C區), edited by Claudia Wenzel [Wen Diya 溫狄婭] and Sun Hua 孫華, 77–96. Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz and Hangzhou: China Academy of Art Press.
Chinese translation (in the same volume): Zuo Guanming 左冠明 (Stefano Zacchetti). “Zhongjing mulu” 《眾經目錄》, 65–76.
- 2016b “Notions and Visions of the Canon in Early Chinese Buddhism.” In Spreading Buddha’s Word in East Asia: The Formation and Transformation of the Chinese Buddhist Canon, edited by Jiang Wu and Lucille Chia, 81–108. New York: Columbia University Press.
- 2015a “Prajñāpāramitā Sūtras.” In Brill’s Encyclopedia of Buddhism. Vol. 1: Literature and Languages, edited by Jonathan A. Silk (chief ed.), Oskar von Hinüber, Vincent Eltschinger, 171–209. Leiden: Brill.
- 2015b “Mind the Hermeneutical Gap: A Terminological Issue in Kumārajīva’s Version of The Diamond Sutra.” In Chinese Buddhism: Past, Present and Future (Hanchuan Fojiao yanjiu de guoqu xianzai weilai huiyi lunwenji 漢傳佛教研究的過去現在未來) 會議論文集, edited by Xie Daning 謝大寧, 157–193. Yilan: Foguang daxue Fojiao yanjiu zhongxin 佛光大學佛教研究中心.
- 2014a “Review of Marcus Bingenheimer. Studies in Āgama Literature—With Special Reference to the Shorter Chinese Samyuktāgama.” Journal of the Oxford Centre for Buddhist Studies 7: 252–274.
- 2014b “Note lessicali sino-buddhiste.” In Il liuto e i libri. Studi in onore di Mario Sabattini, edited by Magda Abbiati and Federico Greselin, 897–906. Venezia: Edizioni Ca’ Foscari.
- 2013a “Perfection of Wisdom” (online). In Oxford Bibliographies in Buddhism, edited by Richard K. Payne. New York: Oxford University Press. Added on 22 April 2013.
- 2012 “La costruzione pretransitiva nelle traduzioni buddhiste di epoca Han.” In Cina. La centralità ritrovata. Atti del XII Convegno dell’Associazione Italiana Studi Cinesi (AISC), Cagliari, 17–18 settembre 2009, edited by Francesca Congiu, Barbara Onnis, Cristina Pinna, 281–291. AIPSA Edizioni: Cagliari.
- 2011 “What can we learn from variant readings? New light on the history of the Jin Canon 金藏 from the textual study of the Guang zan jing 光讚經.” In The First International Conference of Buddhist Tripitaka Studies (2010 Foxue yanjiu lunwen ji: diyi jie guoji Fojiao dazangjing xueshu yantaohui 2010 佛學研究論文集: 第一屆國際佛教大藏經學術研討會), 307–323. Gaoxiong: Foguangshan wenjiao jijinhui 佛光山文教基金會.

- 2010a “Some Remarks on the Authorship and Chronology of the Yin chi ru jing zhu 陰持入經註: The Second Phase in the Development of Chinese Buddhist Exegetical Literature.” In Buddhist Asia 2: Papers from the Second Conference of Buddhist Studies Held in Naples in June 2004 (Università degli Studi di Napoli “L’Orientale” – Centro di Studi sul Buddhismo), edited by Giacomella Orofino and Silvio Vita, 141–198. Kyoto: Italian School of East Asian Studies.
- 2010b “A ‘new’ early Chinese Buddhist commentary: The nature of the Da anban shouyi jing 大安般守意經 T 602 reconsidered.” Journal of the International Association of Buddhist Studies 31(1–2) (2008 [2010]): 421–484.
- 2010c “Defining An Shigao’s 安世高 Translation Corpus: The State of the Art in Relevant Research.” In Xiyu lishi yuyan yanjiu jikan 西域历史语言研究集刊 (Historical and Philological Studies of China’s Western Regions), vol. 3, edited by Shen Weirong 沈衛榮, 249–270. Beijing: Kexue chubanshe 科學出版社.
- 2010d “Il Canone buddhista cinese.” In Dizionario del Sapere Storico Religioso del Novecento, edited by Alberto Melloni, 212–229. Bologna: Il Mulino.
- 2010e “Il Buddhismo cinese dalle origini al 581.” In La Cina. Il. L’età imperiale dai Tre Regni ai Qing, edited by Mario Sabattini and Maurizio Scarpari, 429–490. Torino: Einaudi.
- 2008a “Fondamentalmente pura è la mente: la concezione del “pensiero luminoso” nelle fonti buddhiste cinesi del periodo arcaico.” In Mente e coscienza tra India e Cina, edited by Emanuela Magno, 131–147. Firenze: Società Editrice Fiorentina.
- 2008b “Il Buddhismo cinese tra Han Posteriori e Tang (II–X sec. d.C.).” In Cina: alla corte degli imperatori. Capolavori mai visti dalla tradizione Han all’eleganza Tang (25–907), edited by Sabrina Rastelli, 61–65. Milano: Skira editore.
- 2007 “Inventing a New Idiom: Some Aspects of the Language of the Yin chi ru jing 陰持入經 T 603 Translated by An Shigao.” Annual Report of The International Research Institute for Advanced Buddhology at Soka University 10: 395–416.
- 2006a “Breve storia dell’assoluto. Una nota sull’uso del termine juedui / zettai nel Canone buddhista cinese.” In Sentieri di mezzo tra Occidente e Oriente (Simplegadi: Rivista di filosofia interculturale, anno 11, n. 6), edited by Marcello Ghilardi and Emanuela Magno, 55–65. Milano–Udine: Mimesis.
- 2006b “Alcune osservazioni sul canone buddhista cinese nella fase della trasmissione manoscritta.” In Scritture e codici nelle culture dell’Asia: Giappone, Cina, Tibet, India. Prospettive di studio, edited by Giuliano Boccali and Maurizio Scarpari, 161–182. Venezia: Cafoscarina.
- 2005a “Note lessicografiche sulle traduzioni buddhiste cinesi del periodo antico.” In Caro Maestro...: Scritti in onore di Lionello Lanciotti per l’ottantesimo compleanno, edited by Maurizio Scarpari and Tiziana Lippiello, 1261–1270. Venezia: Cafoscarina.
- 2005b “Brief Communication: An Additional Note on the Terms 念 and 待 in the Kongō-ji Manuscript Text of An Shigao’s Shi’er men jing 十二門經.” Annual Report of the International Research Institute for Advanced Buddhist Studies at Soka University 8: 395–396.
- 2004a “The Scripture on the Twelve Gates Preached by the Buddha (Kongō-ji Ms A 金剛寺本—甲本, ll. 282–364).” In Kongōji issaikyō no kisoteki kenkyū to shinshutsu butten no kenkyū 金剛寺一切經の基礎的研究と新出仏典の研究, edited by Ochiai Toshinori 落合俊典, pp. 240–231 (reverse pagination). Tokyo: Kokusai Bukkyōgaku daigakuin daigaku 国際仏教学大学院大学.
- 2004b (With Tilmann Vetter) “On Jingfa 經法 in Early Chinese Buddhist Translations.” Annual Report of the International Research Institute for Advanced Buddhist Studies at Soka University 7: 159–166.

- 2004c “Teaching Buddhism in Han China: A Study of the Ahan koujie shi'er yinyuan jing T 1508 Attributed to An Shigao.” Annual Report of the International Research Institute for Advanced Buddhist Studies at Soka University 7: 197–224.
- 2004d “An Shigao’s Texts Preserved in the Newly Discovered Kongō-ji Manuscript and Their Significance for the Study of Early Chinese Buddhism.” Indogaku Bukkyōgaku Kenkyū 印度學仏教學研究 (Journal of Indian and Buddhist Studies) 52.2: 57–60.
- 2003 “The Rediscovery of Three Early Buddhist Scriptures on Meditation: A Preliminary Analysis of the Fo shuo shi'er men jing, the Fo shuo jie shi'er men jing Translated by An Shigao and Their Commentary Preserved in the Newly Found Kongō-ji Manuscript.” Annual Report of the International Research Institute for Advanced Buddhist Studies at Soka University 6: 251–299.
Chinese translation: Zuo Guanming 左冠明 (Stefano Zacchetti), trans. Ji Yun 紀贇. “Sanbu zaoqi chanding Fojiao jingdian de chongxin faxian: xin faxian Jin’gangsi An Shigao yi Foshuo shi’ermen jing, Foshuo jie shi’ermen jing yiji zhushi de chubu yanjiu” 三部早期禪定佛教經典的重新發現—新發現金剛寺安世高譯《佛說十二門經》、《佛說解十二門經》以及注釋的初步研究. Fojiao wenhua yanjiu 佛教文化研究 (Studies of Buddhist Culture) 6 (2018): 102–181.
- 2002a “An early Chinese translation corresponding to Chapter 6 of the Peṭakopadesa. An Shigao’s Yin chi ru jing T 603 and its Indian original: a preliminary survey.” Bulletin of the School of Oriental and African Studies 65(1): 74–98.
- 2002b “Il Capitolo 25 dal Zhong lun. Esaminare il nirvāna.” Annali di Ca’ Foscari (Serie orientale 33) 41.3: 151–173.
- 2002c “Brief Communication: On the Authenticity of the Kongōji Manuscript of An Shigao’s Anban Shouyi jing 安般守意經.” Annual Report of the International Research Institute for Advanced Buddhist Studies at Soka University 5: 157–158.
- 2002d “Some remarks on the ‘Peṭaka Passages’ in the Da zhidu lun and their Relation to the Pāli Peṭakopadesa.” Annual Report of the International Research Institute for Advanced Buddhist Studies at Soka University 5: 67–85.
- 2001 “Identificazione e autorappresentazione: archetipi scritturali delle fonti sulle traduzioni buddhiste cinesi.” In Cina: miti e realtà. Atti del convegno dell’Associazione Italiana di Studi Cinesi, Venezia, 21–23 maggio 1998, edited by Alfredo Cadonna and Franco Gatti, 489–503. Venezia: Cafoscarina.
- 1997 “Un problema di critica testuale nel Foshuo zhuan falun jing (T 109) attribuito ad An Shigao.” Annali di Ca’ Foscari (Serie orientale 28) 36.3: 381–395.
- 1996a “Dharmagupta’s Unfinished Translation of the Diamond-Cleaver (Vajracchedikā-Prajñāpāramitā-sūtra.)” T’oung Pao 82(1–3): 137–152.
- 1996b “Il Chu sanzang ji ji di Sengyou come fonte per lo studio delle traduzioni buddhiste cinesi: lo sviluppo della tecnica di traduzione dal II al V secolo d.C..” Annali di Ca’ Foscari (Serie orientale 27) 35(3): 347–374.

Tesi di dottorato (Ph.D. dissertation)

- 1999 La più antica versione cinese della Pañcaviṃśatisāhasrikā Prajñāpāramitā. Tesi di dottorato, Università Ca’ Foscari, Venezia, defended on 5 March 1999.

Tesi di laurea (undergraduate/graduate dissertation)

- 1994 Le versioni cinesi del Sutra del Diamante (Vajracchedikā Prajñāpāramitā). Uno studio comparativo con una traduzione della versione di Kumārajīva. Tesi di laurea, Università Ca’ Foscari, Venezia, defended on 4 March 1994.